ENSHPO at A+A 2025: Building Europe's Future of Safety Together

Listening, connecting, and defining ENSHPO's plan for 2026

At A+A 2025 in Düsseldorf, ENSHPO brought together members and sponsors to set a shared plan for 2026. The morning meeting focused on listening to our network, strengthening collaboration, and outlining initiatives that will support OSH professionals and shape ENSHPO's long-term vision for safety in Europe

ENSHPO's participation in A+A 2025 in Düsseldorf marked an important moment of reflection and renewal for the European Network of Safety and Health Professional Organisations. During the Members and Sponsors Meeting on October 4th, we came together to listen, exchange experiences, and define ENSHPO's plan for 2026 — a program that will guide our immediate priorities and pave the way for future long-term strategies.

Our goal was clear: to create space for open dialogue and genuine exchange. We wanted to hear directly from the people who represent ENSHPO — member associations, training institutions, and industrial partners — and understand their perspectives on how to strengthen our collective role in shaping occupational safety and health across Europe.

In a constantly evolving context, effectiveness means keeping a finger on the pulse of our network. Listening to our member organizations and like-minded sponsors allows us to maintain a clear direction that reflects their needs and expectations, ensuring that ENSHPO continues to serve its members, support local communities, and contribute to Europe's broader goals of safety and well-being.

The brainstorming session at A+A was dynamic and participatory. Members and sponsors contributed valuable insights on how ENSHPO can continue to evolve alongside the OSH profession and anticipate the needs of tomorrow's workforce. Through this discussion, we reaffirmed our collective commitment to being present and active at every level of our network. In 2026, ENSHPO will participate in local member organization meetings, showing visible support and unity while promoting stronger collaboration between associations, institutions, and industry. This presence will not only symbolize solidarity — it will also bring tangible benefits. Together with our sponsors, ENSHPO will work to deliver practical support, technical expertise, and shared visibility across Europe's OSH community.

Our sponsors – Faraone Industries, Kiwitron, and ATG Gloves – will continue to play a vital role in the year ahead. Their commitment goes beyond sponsorship: each contributes valuable innovation, technology, and knowledge that strengthen our shared mission. A key focus for 2026 will be expanding access to specialized training and microcredential programs, designed to help OSH professionals gain targeted, recognized qualifications. These programs, developed in partnership with our sponsors, will support continuous learning and align skills with the changing demands of modern workplaces.

Looking toward 2026, ENSHPO, thanks to the participation and support of its members and sponsors, will also invest in interactive webinars and online workshops to ensure broader access to professional development opportunities. By using AI-driven tools, we aim to promote inclusion, break down language barriers and reach professionals across all regions – enabling members to share experiences, access knowledge, and connect with peers throughout Europe.

This digital expansion will strengthen our network's visibility and impact, ensuring that ENSHPO is not just a name at the European level, but a living, supportive community accessible and beneficial to all.

The outcome of our meeting at A+A confirmed our shared vision: ENSHPO will continue to evolve from a coordination platform into a proactive, value-creating community that drives innovation and professional excellence in occupational safety and health. By defining clear, actionable objectives for 2026, ENSHPO has laid the groundwork for longer-term progress – one that unites members, partners, and sponsors around shared priorities, practical results, and a strong European identity.

Through continued dialogue, visibility, and collaboration, ENSHPO reaffirms its mission: to empower OSH professionals, support member organizations, and make safety and health a central pillar of Europe's sustainable future.
